Light the House

Dear Friend of the House,

Christmas is a special time for families, and we all want to spend the holidays with our loved ones. At Ronald McDonald House British Columbia and Yukon, we ensure that sick children and their families can celebrate together and enjoy the festivities of the season even while facing a serious illness.

This holiday season, we invite you to help us make the holidays magical for our children and families. By taking part in Light the House, you will help to create a beautifully decorated home-away-from-home for the holidays, and keep families together when it matters most.

Participate with your business, family, or community group, demonstrate your creative flair and generate team building by sponsoring and decorating a Christmas tree. Take part in festive activities such as our tree lighting ceremony, caroling, and of course, enjoy holiday treats with our families! Your tree will be on display at the House throughout the holiday season, for the public and for the enjoyment of our families.

Each tree in the House costs $2,000, with one additional large tree at the front of the House costing $5000, and all proceeds provide accommodation for families that call RMH BC 'home.' Through the Light the House campaign we hope to raise 1,000 nights of accommodation for BC and Yukon families!

Your support will give our families the simple comforts of home: a comfortable bed, a kitchen to cook in and a place to put up their feet at the end of a long day. Your generosity will also provide a network of support for families who are away from their home communities during the holidays, and help provide some joy, tradition and normalcy at a time when their lives are anything but normal.

We hope you are able to join us in transforming the House into a magical home-away-from-home for the holidays, and help us give sick children the best Christmas gift of all – their families. Thank you for your consideration.

Yours truly,

About Ronald McDonald House BC and Yukon

Far from home. Financially strained. Emotionally drained. Every year thousands of families come to Vancouver in search of life-saving medical treatment for their seriously ill children. Vulnerable and tired in a strange city, these families need a comfortable and affordable place where they can feel safe and enjoy the simple comforts of home – a family dinner, a bedtime story, a game of catch – all while they deal with the challenges that come with having a child who is seriously ill.

For over 30 years, Ronald McDonald House British Columbia and Yukon has provided just that.

Within our walls, kids undergoing treatment for life-threatening illnesses bask in the glow of family love and get the support they need as they engage in the fight of their lives. Here, parents under siege offer mutual support to others who face similar worries and challenges. And here, people have access to services that can help to put some joy and establish normalcy at a time when their lives are anything but normal.

Ronald McDonald House British Columbia and Yukon is more than just a place for families to stay – it's a place for families to heal better together.

Meet Nicola

In November 2016, Nicola was diagnosed with leukemia at just 16 months old. She and her family were airlifted to Vancouver from their home on Vancouver Island, and found out that they would not be going home for months.

At the House, Nicola's family found a community of support made up of staff, volunteers, and other families who understood exactly what they were going through and who could help each other cope.

Staying at the House also meant that Nicola's older brother and sister could stay with her for the holidays and the family could celebrate together. "Ronald McDonald House includes everybody. They take care of the whole family, not just the patient," says dad Mike.
